Our own Superhero, the extremely buff and handsome author Markus A. Kassel, earned degrees in Psychology and in Communications and a black belt in Karate, and is a ring-tested kick boxer. This combination of educational and physical training has allowed him to accumulate a vast wealth of knowledge, not only on the quickest means to attain one's physical peak but also on what it takes to toughen up mentally and develop a sharp, indestructible mind. In his initial REAL LIFE SUPERMAN books his emphasis was on training and muscle and strength building, becoming tougher and deadlier â " how to prepare to defend your self fighting! And that is precisely why he subtitled his editions How Overcome Your Limitations, Build Self-Confidence and Grow and Invincible Mind. Now he dares us to go for adventure and action to make us truly well rounded ready for anything Supermen Just as he did with his last books SUPERHERO SIX PACK and SUPERHERO ARMOR PLATED CHEST he expands his arena of knowledge and coaching and if there is any doubt as to his exercise in this field, the physique of the sculpted hunk on the bio page is Markus himself! He pauses for books on aging, diet, and health and now reaches into our psyches with SUPERHERO KILLER CONFIDENCE. From Markus's™ previous books we have learned he is a pragmatist – “ get right down to the problem, teach the way out of the present state and move into the new enhanced you! In this new book Markus offers his manifesto about self-confidence. – “When it comes to ultimate self-confidence, there are no better examples than superheroes. They're™ the people who look danger right in the face and run toward it. The ones who risk their own safety for the sake of those in need. They've™ seen evil up close and, still, they believe in (and fight for) good.

I received a complimentary copy of this book for an honest review Markus Kassell has a degree in psychology and this quick read of a book (Killer Confidence clocks in at 84 pages) proves that he was awake in class. Furthermore, Markus is an accomplished athlete, earning his black belt in karate and then doing what most of us would never do: get in the ring to test his skills. Translation: he walks the talk. It doesn't™ take long to read eighty-four pages, but the content of the book requires an extraordinary amount of work and introspection on the part of the author that few people are willing to make, or act on. Fact: You will die one day. Fact: You are not awesome at everything. Harsh? No. Realistic, and Markus's™ point is – “ among many – “ that many people talk themselves into quiet corners and live boring lives, afraid to act on their dreams because there is always an excuse. Markus offers refreshing insight on the other extreme: narcissism in society. He backs up what he has to say about narcissism, and the difference between self-esteem and self-confidence, from psychology journals without getting academic. The writing style is candid; at times, humorous, and above all, honest. I won't™ spoil it and tell you what his solution or plan is for building confidence because the price of the book is a lot cheaper than therapy and self-help books. What I can tell you is that FEAR is the culprit to better living. I'd™ say that people are afraid to be successful and self-confident because they are afraid of what they are capable of, or rocking the boat with others in their lives.
