Synopsis

Matt Washington has spent the past few months gazing out his office window, focusing on the man of his dreams in the office across the street. He's been watching Tyler Durham from a distance for as long as he can remember, and he finally encounters him late one night when their paths cross in the neighborhood. Tyler begins to speak openly with Matt about his very public divorce from his estranged wife, and as Matt learns more about him, he tries his best to keep his true desires hidden. Matt soon discovers that Tyler recently sold his company for a vast sum of money, and despite his best efforts to avoid scrutiny, the public has been watching him. As the two men continue to spend time together, Matt's attraction starts to grow, but Tyler insists that they keep things private. He confesses to Matt that he signed an unusual prenuptial agreement, which his wife is trying to exploit by prolonging the divorce. Tyler explains that the agreement stipulates that if he is unfaithful to her, she gets half of everything he owns, so they must be discreet. Matt and Tyler begin to see each other regularly, but their time together is captured by the lens of an investigative journalist who wants a payoff to remain silent about their affair. Tyler is faced with an ex-wife who feels entitled to a large settlement, and a reporter who's attempting to blackmail him. Matt is forced to ask himself if he has a realistic chance at love with Tyler, or if his dreams will be shattered by the actions of others.

Review text
Have you ever fantasized about someone you knew you had a snowball's chance in hell on ever meeting. Just stare at them under hidden lashes, or sly glances. Do you remember that first blush of excitement and made up this whole world of you and them? Do you remember that faltered heartbeat when lust took over? Daydream believer. For months Matt had been going gaga over the handsome man on the phone outside his work window. He knew it was a mere fantasy, but what wouldn't he give to make the dream a reality! Having had no luck in the dating or romance department, Matt knew his days were numbered. His dream man was in the midst of a lengthy divorce AND selling his business. Which meant, Matt's fantasy was about to go up in smoke. When you know it's right. With an ironclad prenup, there was no way Tyler was letting his vindictive estranged wife get what she thought she deserved. Nearly one year later and they were no closer to being severed. Then Matt walked into his life and things changed. Now he he was experiencing something for the first time - feelings for another man and trying not to let his wife's stipulation cost him half of his fortune. But with a nosy neighbour and a greedy journalist in the mix, their clandestine love affair seemed to be making headline. Throw in a murder and blackmail and you have a book worth reading. I was awed by Tyler's flow into being with a man for the first time, his hesitance as he fought what was happening and how loving and supportive he was to Matt. Matt was a sweetheart who, even when I thought was too far gone had enough strength to call a spade a spade.
